We must forgive our hapless equestrian. China has surprised many people—including its own leaders and people as well as foreign observers—more often than most of them care to remember. Its stunning downfall from the apex of world civilization, where it remained for millennia through the early nineteenth century, to the ignoble condition of the “sick man of Asia” by the late nineteenth century, still baffles. Subsequently, China could not consolidate a capitalist economy or a stable polity at a time when some of its neighbors did so. Instead it produced the most massive socialist revolution and transformation in the third world. It experienced several dramatic shifts in the course of doing so. Departing early from the Soviet model, for years it evinced a driving impulse for “continuing revolution” that put it at the extreme left among state socialist countries. Then in 1978 China switched course, pioneering broad-gauged structural reform way ahead of other state socialist countries. In 1989 it switched back, moving sternly and decisively against reform precisely at a time when most others were being overcome by popular movements for change. Yet within three years it reversed course again, deepening its commitment to structural economic reform even as it has continued to adjure serious political change. Today China holds out the prospect of a “third way”, a hybrid combining in a new way features of state socialism and capitalism that might now be called “market Leninism”.

Politics 110 provides a comprehensive introduction to China’s revolution and the transmutations of its socialism and capitalism, focusing on these puzzles among others. The course is organized chronologically and then topically. It involves the twin tasks of describing Chinese affairs and, on that basis, analyzing them. The course will familiarize you with what has been happening in China through readings, lectures and film. As we gain a base of knowledge, we will venture to come to terms with it through various kinds of conversations: discussions in and outside of class, and exchanges of our questions, concerns and views in writing on our blog.

Before each class I expect you to complete readings that will cover the subject for the day. In class the material cannot be covered in anything approaching the fullness of what you need to know about it. If you have not done the reading before class, you will not be able to get much out of that session, and you will, unavoidably, feel lost.

We will be making intensive and regular use of Blackboard.

§ To encourage reflective reading, help you retain what you have read, and help me calibrate what we do in class, once each week I expect you to write on Blackboard a short response to questions I will have posed in advance about the works we are confronting. You’re also welcome to comment there at any time on what others in the class have written. Start a debate! You may also use the blog to raise questions on which you would like help.

§ I use the blogs to promote your learning, not to evaluate it. I want you to think and write your blogs freely and creatively, and to take risks. Therefore I do not grade them. But because I view them as very important for your learning, I do factor heavily into your final grade simply whether you have done them seriously and regularly.

§ Specifically, those of you with surnames beginning A-M should do so by Tuesday morning at 9:00 AM, and those with surnames M-Z by 9:00 AM Thursday. The 9:00 AM deadline is firm — indeed, the blog closes on the stroke of the hour — for two reasons. First, that’s when I start preparing for class. Moreover, the blogs are a process, not a product; the whole point is to do them week-in, week-out, not at the end of the term in order to meet a requirement.

§ If you must miss or inadvertently have missed your appointed day, as will inevitably happen, just post a reply for another day that week; if you miss a week, just do two the following week. The spirit here is to do them regularly, but we can be flexible in doing so. You may, of course, respond more than once each week if you like; the more often you do, the more you will learn.

§ On each morning or early afternoon before class, prepare by taking a few moments to log in to the blog to read what everyone has written.

You will also write two open-book, take-home essays of approximately 1,500 words (≈ 6 pages) each. The schedule can be found in the course outline below. These require a command of the material, but they are oriented mainly toward developing your engagement with and analysis and interpretation of it. To give you an idea of what to expect and to help you orient your reading and thinking, starting on page 8 you will find the essay questions used in the most recent offering of the course. You can expect many of the same issues to be treated this time around, perhaps with some of the same or similar questions. Andrew Fox, our writing tutor, can help you write great papers. I will be happy to review drafts of your papers before you finalize them. And if you are not happy with the outcome of your first paper, you are welcome to rewrite it any time during the rest of the semester.

I will evaluate your work according to the following weightings:

- Blog comments: 40%
- Papers: 30% each
- Active listening and quality (not quantity) of participation in class: A “fudge factor”

Please take careful note of these proportions. They reflect my conviction that the daily process of the course is as important to your learning as the two papers you will write. In the past students who assumed that the papers were their only significant responsibilities for the course have been unpleasantly surprised at the end of the semester.

We are screening several films. All but one can be viewed online; I’ve scheduled that one for TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6 FROM 7-10 PM, SO PLEASE PLAN ACCORDINGLY.

You should keep up with the news from China. There are several possibilities:

- § The BBC provides comprehensive, accurate reporting at http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world/asia/china/
- § James Miles, of The Economist, is an outstanding journalist (and the son of an Obie). Be aware of the magazine’s definite neo-liberal ideology, though, which often gets inserted by editors and unbalances their analysis.
- § James Fallows has been writing most astute articles in The Atlantic.
- § Official news from China can be found in the Beijing Review (a weekly magazine, in Mudd) and China Daily (http://www.chinadaily.com.cn/en/home/). Even though they are official state publications, they are actually fairly lively, somewhat objective, and often even critical.
- § The Chinese Embassy to the US web site contains official government news releases and other basic information): http://www.china-embassy.org/eng/

Please consult our schematic chronology (page 10) and guide to the rudiments of Chinese pronunciation (page 14). The timeline can help bring some order to the complex sequence of events we will be studying. The pronunciation guide will help you discharge your responsibility as students of China to pronounce Chinese words and names properly, or at least better than much of the broadcast news media who are shirking their duty in this respect.

Newspapers and cyberspace can provide timely information; but information is not knowledge. For that, we still need, among other things, analyses contained in books. Each year Americans spend five times as much on dog food as on college books. Politics 110 is doing its part to help us get our priorities right. The following books are available for purchase at the Oberlin Bookstore:

- Marc Blecher, China Against the Tides: Restructuring Through Revolution, Radicalism and Reform (third edition [N.b. avoid earlier editions])
- Barbara Entwistle and Gail E. Henderson, eds., Re-Drawing Boundaries: Work, Households and Gender in China
- William Hinton, Fanshen
- William Joseph, ed., Politics in China
Elizabeth Perry and Mark Selden, eds., Chinese Society: Change, Conflict and Resistance (third edition [N.b. avoid earlier editions])

William Strunk and E.B. White, Elements of Style

Gordon White, Riding the Tiger: The Politics of Economic Reform in Post-Mao China

These books are also available on reserve, though in insufficient quantities for you to be able to rely on getting them whenever you need them; i.e., reserve will not substitute for owning your own copies. Articles and book chapters are also available on reserve and/or Blackboard (under “Library Readings”). All this is indicated in the schedule below.

Social science should be read differently than other kinds of material. Don’t be a dumb reader, by which I mean don’t let the author (including me) lead you around by the nose.

 § Don’t start with the first word and continue to the last word. Try to figure out the overall argument before you begin reading, by looking for summaries at the beginning or end of each section or chapter. This isn’t a detective novel, so it’s better to know the conclusion before you set out.

 § Have questions in mind whose answers you are seeking out. The blog questions will help you in this respect by providing them, though you should of course add your own.

 § Don’t get bogged down. Once you know what you’re looking for, it’ll be easier to choose which paragraphs and sections to read carefully and which you can skim. Yes, skim. And if there’s material you can’t apprehend after a serious try, jot down your question to ask in class or on the blog and then move on.

...

Schedule of Classes, Topics, Readings and Assignments

1. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

Tuesday and Thursday, September 4-6: Course Introduction/Imperial China

Marc Blecher, China Against the Tides, Introduction and pages 1-7

William Hinton, Fanshen, chapter 4

Barrington Moore, Social Origins of Dictatorship and Democracy, pages 162-187 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Theda Skocpol, States and Social Revolutions, pages 67-80 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Screen China: A Century of Revolution, Part 1 (online at http://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=%22china+in+revolution%22&aq=f and on reserve [as first ten minutes of cassette 1 of this title])

Tuesday, September 11: The Republic of China

Blecher, pages 7-9

Moore, pages 187-201, 433-452

Skocpol, pages 147-154, 236-251

Screen China in Revolution, Parts 2-10 (online at http://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=%22china+in+revolution%22&aq=f and on reserve [as the rest of cassette 1 of this title]) (covers both the Republic and the Communist-led revolution)
Thursday and Tuesday, September 13-18: The Communist-Led Revolution
Blecher, pages 9-32
Hinton, chapters 10, 15-19, 22, 23, 35-37, 46-53
Mao Zedong, “Some Questions Concerning Methods of Leadership” (on Blackboard)
Moore, pages 201-227
Skocpol, pages II2-II7, 252-262

II. THE MAOIST DECADES, 1949-78

Thursday, Tuesday and Thursday, September 20-27: The Socialist Transition, 1949-57
A: Consolidation and Socialist Beginnings
Blecher, pages 27, 32-34
Mark Selden, ed., The People’s Republic of China, pages 175-193, 254-277 (on reserve and Blackboard)
Vivienne Shue, “Mutual Aid” (on Blackboard; also in chapter four of her Peasant China in Transition [on reserve])

B: Accelerated Socialist Transformation in Urban Areas, 1953-57
Blecher, pages 34-38
Selden, ed., pages 290-314 (on reserve and Blackboard)
Stephen Andors, “From Reconstruction to the Great Leap Forward” (on Blackboard; also in chapter 3 of his China’s Industrial Revolution [on reserve])

C: Accelerated Socialist Transformation in the Rural Areas, 1955-56
Blecher, pages 38-43
Shue, “Collectivization” (on Blackboard; also in chapter seven of her Peasant China in Transition [on reserve])
Selden, ed., pages 350-358, 364-373 (on reserve and Blackboard)

D: Sharpening Political Conflict, 1956-57
Blecher, pages 43-middle of 47
Selden, ed., pages 314-330 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Tuesday, October 2: The Great Leap Forward: Radical Communist Experimentation, 1958-61
Blecher, pages middle of 47-50
Hinton, Shenfan, chapters 29-34 (n.b. This is NOT Fanshen) (on reserve and Blackboard)
Selden, ed., pages 467-482 (on reserve and Blackboard)

FIRST PAPER TOPICS DISTRIBUTED

Thursday, October 4: Readjustment and Emergent Two Line Struggle, 1962-65
Blecher, pages 50-54
Jack Gray, “The Two Roads” (on Blackboard; also in Stuart Schram, ed., Authority, Participation and Cultural Change in China [on reserve], pages 109-158)
Selden, ed., pages 530-541 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Tuesday, October 9: The Cultural Revolution, I: Narrative and Political Sociology, 1966-76
Blecher, 54-62
Marc Blecher and Gordon White, Micropolitics in Contemporary China, chapters 2-6 (on reserve and Blackboard; chapter 1 recommended to provide context)
Thursday, October 11: The Cultural Revolution, II: Political Economy, 1966-76
Peer Møller Christensen, "The Shanghai School and Its Rejection" (on Blackboard; also in Stephan Feuchtwang and Athar Hussain, eds., The Chinese Economic Reforms, pages 74-90 [on reserve])
Mark Selden, ed., pages 651-662 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Tuesday, October 16: Summary of Maoist Period
Blecher, 143-145

Thursday, October 18: Class canceled due to my professional travel (to China 😁)

Friday, October 19: Papers due.

FALL BREAK

III. STRUCTURAL REFORM, 1978-PRESENT

Tuesday, October 30: Politics, I: Theory and Ideology
Blecher, pages 63-65, 167-169
Gordon White, Riding the Tiger, chapter 5

Thursday, November 1: The State
Blecher, chapter 4
White, chapter 6
Screen China from the Inside, Part I (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN])

Tuesday and Thursday, November 6-8: The State and Society
A: Overview
Benewick and Donald, map 23
Blecher, pages 109-118, 172-184
White, chapter 7
Screen China From the Inside, Part 4 (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN])

B: Urban and Labor Protest
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 7:00-10:00 PM: Screening of The Gate of Heavenly Peace
Blecher, pages 76-80 (re-read), 125-127
Joseph, chapter 9
Perry and Selden, eds., Chinese Society: Change, Conflict and Resistance, chapters 2-3

C: Rural Protest
Joseph, chapter 8
Perry and Selden, chapters 4-5

D: Nationality and Religion
Benewick and Donald, maps 8 & 32
Blecher, pages 128-129
Joseph, chapters 14-15 (choose one chapter)
Perry and Selden, eds., chapters 9-11 (choose one or two chapters)
Tuesday, Thursday and Tuesday, November 13-20: Political Economy
A: Overview
   Blecher, pages 131-132
   White, chapters 1-2
   Joseph, chapter 7
   Benewick and Donald, maps 9-17
B: Rural Political Economy
   The Maoist Model
   Blecher, pages 132-133, 137-138, 140-144
   Structural Reform
   Benewick and Donald, maps 12 (again)
   Blecher, pages 147-148, 150-151, 152-153, 161-164
   White, chapter 3
   Screen All Under Heaven (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN])
C: Urban Political Economy
   The Maoist Model
   Blecher, pages 133-140, 144-145
   Structural Reform
   Benewick and Donald, map 13 (again)
   Blecher, pages 145-147, 148-150, 151-161, 165
   White, chapter 4

THANKSGIVING

Tuesday and Thursday, November 27-29: Gender and Family
A: The Maoist Period
   Blecher, pages 119-123
   Entwistle and Henderson, eds., Re-drawing Boundaries, chapters 5-6
B: Structural Reform
   Benewick and Donald, map 7
   Blecher, pages 123-125
   Entwistle and Henderson, eds., chapters 7-9
   Perry and Selden, chapter 6
   Screen Small Happiness and China From the Inside (Part 2) (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN])

Tuesday, December 4: Population
   Benewick and Donald, maps 5-6
   Joseph, chapter 13
   Perry and Selden, chapter 7
   SECOND PAPER TOPICS DISTRIBUTED

Thursday, December 6: The Environment
   Benewick and Donald, maps 33-35
   Joseph, chapter 11
   Perry and Selden, chapter 8
   Screen China From the Inside, Part 3 (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN]).
Tuesday, December 11:

The Arts (Especially Music) and Politics
Joseph, chapter 10
Richard Kraus, Pianos and Politics in China, chapters 1, 4, 7 (on reserve and Blackboard)

Public Health
Benewick and Donald, map 28
Joseph, ed., chapter 12
Wang Shaoguang, “China’s Health System: From Crisis to Opportunity” (on Blackboard)

Screen To Taste a Hundred Herbs (on reserve and Blackboard [N.B. IF OFF CAMPUS, YOU WILL NEED VPN])

Thursday, December 13: Conclusion: A “Third Way” Toward the Future?
Blecher, chapter 9
White, chapter 8

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 9:00 PM: SECOND PAPER DUE

...

ESSAY QUESTIONS FROM THE 2010 OFFERING OF THE COURSE

First Essay Topics

1. Discuss some significant ways in which legacies from China’s history before 1949 affected the course of its socialist development. In doing so, you should try to deploy — critically or agreeably — some of the structural concepts and arguments advanced by Moore, Skocpol and me while also combining them with points about “agency” (i.e., political actions chosen by real people (leaders and “masses”) and even “contingency” (accidents). Be sure to be specific not just about the pre-1949 period but also about what in the post-1949 period you are explaining by reference to elements of the past.

2. What does the Chinese case teach us about class structure and struggle under state socialism?

3. The Great Leap Forward and the Cultural Revolution were both in part efforts to resolve some basic problems of Chinese socialism. Compare them along one or more of the following dimensions: the problems they were attempting to address; the specific policies they involved; the kind of politics they involved, within the state and between the state and society; their successes and failures (in terms of their own avowed goals and/or in terms of other evaluative criteria you may wish to bring to bear). Account for the similarities or differences you have discovered.

4. Compare the “open-door rectification” of the land reform period with the Cultural Revolution. Discuss their respective goals, methods and outcomes. Account for the similarities or differences that you find. (Hint: a good way to do this question is to re-read the relevant portions of Fanshen and Micropolitics in Contemporary China.)
5. How can the marked swings of the 1950s — from the moderate policies of the reconstruction period to the First Five Year Plan to the Great Leap Forward — be explained? Is there any underlying logic at work here? If so, does it reflect political intentions of the leadership or just their efforts to cope?

6. Choose one or more key moments in China from the revolutionary period up to the end of the Maoist period. Assess the relative role of the top leadership, middle- and/or lower level officials, and ordinary Chinese citizens in accounting for what occurred. Be careful not to assume that because China is not a Western-style democracy the people played no significant role. They often constrained the top- and middle-level leadership in various ways, and they always provided the context within which the leadership made its choices. Think hard about all this as you formulate your response.

7. Write out your own question, discuss it with me (a necessary step), and then respond to it in writing.

Second Essay Topics

1. Discuss some significant ways in which particular legacies from China’s history before 1949 affected the course of its project of structural reform after 1978. If you wrote on this topic last time, take this opportunity to reevaluate your ideas.

2. “The rural structural reforms were based in significant ways upon the achievements of the socialist transformation of the countryside that preceded them, even as they also undid many of those achievements.”

   — A. Nonimus

Comment.

3. Choose a major difference between the urban and rural structural reforms that you want to explain, and identify some factors that do the explaining. Possible explananda (things explained) and explanans (things that do the explaining) among which you can choose might be: ownership forms; constituencies (i.e., peasants/workers); incentives; economic coördination (plan/market); distributive effects (equality/inequality); effect on economic performance; the pace of reform; the preexisting structures and problems in each sphere; politics (e.g., support and opposition, controversiality, the roles of state and society). These are just suggestions; you may well think of others to bring into either side of the analysis.

4. When compared with other “developing” or “third world” countries, China is often regarded as having achieved a particularly distinguished record in social policy. Evaluate and account for China’s population control policy in both the Maoist and structural reform periods, and relate it to wider questions about China’s politics and state. For example, do the various successes and failures reflect some basic features of the state and politics? Does the imperative of population control demand or promote a particular kind of state and politics, or limit the possible forms that the state and politics can or should take?

5. “The spring 1989 popular demonstrations appeared to be about democracy, but at their bottom lay something else.”

   — Kurt Remarque ( ⊘)

Comment, reflecting also on the movement’s social composition.

6. Account for the leadership’s response to the spring 1989 popular demonstrations, both before and after the infamous night of June 4, in light of what you have learned about Chinese history, politics, society and economy.
7. The structural reform period is considered by some to be the first time since 1949 in which society began to emerge as a political actor and have some impact upon the state. Others think it was there all along, constraining the Maoist state. Still others believe it is not yet a significant factor in Chinese politics. Discuss some aspects of state-society relations in the Maoist and structural reform periods.

8. Compare some of the kinds of political resistance seen in the Maoist period (e.g., the 100 Flowers, the Cultural Revolution, the “localism” described by Shue) with those we have studied for the structural reform period.

9. Compare political resistance under the structural reforms in China’s rural and urban areas. Account for similarities and/or differences in terms of wider aspects of the structural reforms and of the political system.

10. Discuss gender relations in the structural reform period, comparing with the Maoist period. Be sure to locate the gender question within the wider constellations of political and economic forces operating in China. Reflect upon the possible routes to increased gender equality, grounding your prognostications and possible proposals squarely in your understanding of China today.

11. Has China “gone capitalist”?

12. Using music as an example, discuss China’s encounters since 1949 with its own historical culture and with foreign cultural forms, relating the issue to relevant aspects of politics, society and/or economy.

13. “In contrast to Maoist policies, which explicitly focused on the arts, Deng’s economic reforms affected the arts indirectly, yet profoundly.” (Richard Kraus) Discuss.

14. China faces myriad pressing social and economic problems, including a burgeoning population, environmental degradation, and a public health crisis. Does it require high state capacity to solve them? If so, what are the implications of arrogating such capacity to the state for other issues, such as gender equality or better labor conditions, which may require a more democratic approach? In responding to this question, be sure to make specific reference to the material we have studied. (That is, it will not do just to ruminate about your political preferences.)

15. Write your own question, clear it with me, and then answer it.

SCHEMATIC CHRONOLOGY OF CHINESE POLITICS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>c. 500 B.C.E.</td>
<td>Confucius (and other Zhou thinkers, including Daoists &amp; Legalists)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. 220 B.C.E.</td>
<td>First Emperor of Qin unifies China, makes virtual revolution</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. 200 B.C.E. - 200 C.E.</td>
<td>Han Dynasty founded (and Buddhism from India)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. 600 C.E.</td>
<td>Turkic ruling houses regenerate the empire in Sui and Tang</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. 750</td>
<td>Mid-Tang revolution (capita taxes to land, migration north to south)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. 1000-1300</td>
<td>Song (policy-making traditions; culture stronger than army)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1368</td>
<td>Ming expels the Mongols’ harsh and short Yuan Dynasty</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1644</td>
<td>Manchus come to power after the Ming falls in a peasant rebellion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1840</td>
<td>Opium War (unequal Treaty of Nanjing in 1842)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1850-64</td>
<td>Taiping Rebellion (Han gentry/proto-warlord armies save the Qing)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1895</td>
<td>Sino-Japanese War ends with China’s loss</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1898</td>
<td>Hundred Days of Emperor’s reform ended by Empress Dowager &amp; friends</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1905  Confucian exams abolished for posts: Sun Yatsen founds proto-Guomindang
1911  Fall of the empire; Republican Revolution
1915  21 Demands (Japan wants China as protectorate); Yuan Shikai attempts to restore the monarchy and make himself emperor
1919  May 4 Movement protests Versailles gift of Shandong enclaves to Japan
1921  Chinese Communist Party founded (then a minor event, in Shanghai)
1923  First United Front of Guomindang and Communist Party (Sun-Joffe Agreement)
1925  Sun Yatsen dies
1926  Beginning of Northern Expedition of Jiang Kaishek to unify warlords under Guomindang
1927  Jiang attacks Communist Party in “White Terror”, forces it to countryside, begins “Nanjing Decade”
1929-34  Jiangxi Soviet (land reforms); Jiang’s “encirclement campaigns”
1931  Japan seizes Manchuria (N.E. China), later installs Qing emperor there
1934-35  Long March (“go north to resist Japan”), Mao becomes head of Communist Party
1936  Xi'an Incident (anti-Japanese Guomindang generals kidnap Jiang temporarily)
1937  World War II begins: Japan invades N. China Plain & coasts; Guomindang-Communist Party “Second United Front”
1941  Pearl Harbor (U.S. enters war); Guomindang-Communist Party military conflict in Anhui
1945  Japanese surrender; cities given to Jiang’s Army: civil war resumes
1948  People’s Liberation Army attacks in North and Central China; US aids Jiang
1949  “Liberation”: October 1 founding of People’s Republic of China
1950  Korean War (June 25; China enters, October 25); land, labor, & marriage laws
1951  Main land reform; patriotic bourgeois support for CCP in war; truce talks
1952  “Three-anti/five-anti” campaigns to purify & scare bureaucrats and businessmen in cities
1953  Stalin dies; Korea truce
1954  Constitution, centralization; rations; Gao & Rao (regional leaders) purged for being pro-Soviet; lower-stage agricultural coöps
1955  Higher-stage agricultural coöps; First Five Year Plan (1953-57) announced
1956  Hundred Flowers campaign
1957  Anti-rightist Campaign; intellectuals and critics “sent down”
1958  Great Leap Forward (oversized communes, new factory capital, mobilization)
1959  Defense Minister Peng Dehuai purged for criticizing Mao; revolt in Tibet
1960  Famine in post-Leap economic depression; Soviet technicians leave China
1961  Retrenchment to smaller communes, last of “3 bad years”
1962  Border war with India
1963 Socialist Education Campaign: workers & peasants advantaged in jobs, education
1964 Atom bomb successfully tested; army organizes movements for proletarian pride
1965 “On Dismissal of Hai Rui”/“People’s War” (pre-Cultural Revolution radical tracts, Yao Wenyuan/Lin Biao)
1966 Cultural Revolution begins with red guards from cadres’ families, then among ex-bourgeois & contract labor; Liu Shaoqi purged
1967 Cultural Revolution at height: red guard factional coalitions, civil wars
1968 Clean class ranks: soldier-worker-cadre teams force order; USSR invades Prague
1969 Lin Biao named “Mao’s successor”; May 7 cadre schools; Ussuri River fighting between China and USSR
1970 Zhou Enlai-Mao Zedong political coöperation: Mao supports “Gang of 4” too
1971 Lin Biao’s fall; Kissinger’s secret flight to Peking; China takes UN seat
1972 People’s Liberation Army budget cut; official violence ebbs a bit; Shanghai Communique between China and US
1973 Commanders shifted among military regions: Deng reappears after being purged in 1966
1974 “Criticize Confucius” (an allegory: radicals criticize Zhou); leaders ill
1975 Deng Xiaoping quasi-premier for Zhou’s Four Modernizations (removed, 1/76)
1976 Zhou, Mao die (January & September); Hua Guofeng Premier (February), Party Chair (September); “Gang” jailed (October)
1977 Four Modernizations new line, but under old-style leader Hua; admission exams for colleges
1978 Deng in charge at Third Plenum; “democracy wall”; Carter-Hua Communique (US-China relations)
1979 “Rightists” exonerated: rural reforms extend; Vietnam invasion
1980 “Gang of Four” tried: some communes become townships; Zhao Ziyang becomes Premier 1981 Rural incomes up, amid urban shortages: Hu Yaobang replaces Hua as Party Chair
1982 US defense weapons to Taiwan, but US-China agreement on fewer future sales
1983 Spiritual Pollution Campaign stirs doubts in Communist Party about reform, but campaign ends soon
1984 Industrial reforms announced; Hong Kong accord
1985 Old cadres retired at autumn congress; Gorbachev heads USSR
1986 Students protest delay of political reforms, but Communist Party is slow to accommodate them.
1987 Dismissal of Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang; movement against “bourgeois liberalization”
1988 Abortive price reform; inflation; beginning of economic austerity
1989 Broad popular protests followed by repression and martial law; rise of hard-line leadership
1990 Hard-liners in power
1991 Consolidation of post-1989 leadership; economic austerity
1992 Deng’s “Southern Tour”: economic austerity ends; debate on appropriate pace of growth

1993 Some releases from prison of 1989 protesters; economic overheating; rural discontent erupts

1994 High inflation; continuing expressions of discontent

1995 Corruption a major issue; death of Chen Yun; economic soft landing; Taiwan Straits heat up

1996 Economy stabilizes; Taiwan Straits conflict heats up; US-China relations difficult

1997 Death of Deng Xiaoping; return of Hong Kong; 15th Party Congress: Jiang Zemin consolidates leadership and state enterprise reform; Jiang visits US

1998 At National People’s Congress, Premier Li Peng is the first top Chinese leader in history to vacate his position in accordance with the Constitution; President Clinton visits China; hard-liners rise at end of the year

1999 China tense in face of political demonstrations by workers and Falungong spiritual practitioners; US bombs Chinese embassy in Belgrade, provoking popular patriotic outrage and state-approved popular demonstrations.

2000 hard-liners remain in control, keeping political atmosphere repressive

2001 Tensions in US-China relations; China joins WTO

2002 16th Party Congress chooses younger, Hu/Wen leadership; China joins WTO

2003 SARS rocks China; Three Gorges Dam begins operation; Chinese in space

2004 Continued economic growth and tight political control

2005 Hu promotes “harmonious society”; serious chemical spill covered up but then revealed

2006-7 Continuing economic growth and political authoritarianism; new labor laws passed

2008 China hosts the Olympics; huge Sichuan earthquake

2009 Broad political stability amid slowed economic growth and key anniversaries; massive ethnic riot in Xinjiang

2010 Resurgent economic growth; strikes win wage increases

2011 Worsening inflation; major rail crash highlights problems of high-speed development

2012 Major political blowout around Bo Xilai and the “Chongqing model” in the run-up to a major, decennial change of the top leadership; Politics 110 strives yet again to understand all this
GUIDE TO CHINESE ROMANIZATIONS

As students of Chinese politics, it is both respectful and incumbent on us to try to pronounce Chinese names, places and phrases correctly.

There are three major systems of romanization used in the general literature. The first can be called the “post office system”, though it is totally unsystematic. It is mainly used for place names, examples include Peking, Canton, and Amoy.

The other two are Wade-Giles, which was commonly used through the 1970s, and pinyin, which is the official system of the People's Republic, and has completely replaced Wade-Giles in current writing. You will have to discern which one your source is using by inspection. (Our readings use pinyin.) The pinyin system is distinguishable by any of the following: x, q, z, zh, r, g, d, b, ong. By contrast, the Wade-Giles system contains apostrophes and hyphens.

The left side of each equation is the romanization, as you might see it on a page; the right is a usual and approximate English equivalent sound.

PINYIN

\[
\begin{align*} x &= \text{sy} \\
z &= \text{dz} \\
zh &= \text{j} \\
c &= \text{ts} \\
ong &= \text{ung} \\
ian &= \text{ien} \\ u &= \text{way} \\
z &= \text{dz} \\
i &= \text{variable: “-ee” after most initials; “-r” after ch, sh, zh; or a deep “-uh” or no sound after c, r, s, & z.}
\end{align*}
\]

WADE-GILES

When not followed by apostrophes: k = g p = b t = d ts = dz ch = j. When followed by apostrophes, these all have English sounds.

Also: j = r ih = r ui = way yu = yo yü = yû hs = sy