This course is designed to reevaluate how the bloodiest conflict in the history of the world shaped the history of the 20th century and beyond. It takes a broad approach, both geographically and methodologically. As much as possible, we will consider World War II as global history, and the war in Asia on equal terms with the war in Europe. For it was the war in Asia, and the critical role of the United States and the Soviet Union in it, that made World War II truly a "world war" in ways that World War I was not. We will cover traditional subjects like diplomatic, political, and military history, but also social, cultural, and gender history. We will also explore how methodologies can intersect, such as in the cultural history of military experience.

Books for purchase:

Note: This book is also available as an electronic book through OBIS.

Note: This book is also available as a pdf. on Blackboard, as it was unclear for a time whether the book was still in print.

All of these books are also available on reserve.
Requirements:

I. Advance Preparation and Attendance

There is no formal prerequisite for this course. But it assumes a certain familiarity with how to study history at the college level. Consequently, some background in the history of Europe, the United States, or Asia would certainly be of benefit. As you will shortly observe, the readings for this course are diverse in methodology and content.

It is critical that students attend the lectures, the more so the less experienced they are in the study of college-level history. This responsibility must be internalized, however, since there is nothing to be achieved by taking attendance in a class of this size.

II. Readings

While the lectures for the course are organized mostly chronologically, the readings are organized mostly thematically. Therefore, for some of the books, it is difficult to pair the readings with individual lectures. General guidelines are provided below. Students are counseled to read carefully about 100-150 pages per week.

A number of additional readings are original documents available on Blackboard. Some of the assignments from the web at the end of the course are simply for general background.

There are numberless other web sites that deal with World War II. These, like sites on most other topics, vary widely in quality. The best advice is simply to exercise caution and common sense. Students are advised not to spend much time perusing the web for additional readings. There is plenty of work to do simply completing the formal assignments.

III. Written Work

There will be three short (five-page) papers. Each piece of written work will account for one-third of the final grade.

Each paper will have a specific topic, to be explained in handouts distributed one week in advance of the due dates. Alternative topics are possible, but must be approved in advance by the instructor. Due dates are indicated on the syllabus. The third paper will be due at the time set for the final exam in this class by the college exam schedule. It will involve a "think piece" assessing the overall historical significance of World War II.

FINAL PAPERS DUE AT THE TIME DETERMINED
BY THE COLLEGE FINAL EXAM SCHEDULE
(Saturday, May 18, 9 PM)

Additional Ground Rules:

1. No electronic devices, such as laptops, tablet (iPads or the like), or mobile phones may be used in class. An exception will require documentation from the Office of Disability Services.

2. Due dates and page-limit requirements are to be taken most seriously. I am not in the business of persecuting students if a genuine problem exists, but in principle I strongly dislike giving extensions. Normally, I take off 1/3 of a letter grade for every 24 hours a paper is overdue.

3. Three excuses for requesting extensions will never be acceptable: 1) a self-defined character flaw of procrastination; 2) extracurricular activities, including performances and political activities; 3) work in other classes. Two possible exceptions exist for unacceptable excuse #3. I am prepared to exercise some indulgence concerning students completing Seniors Honors projects or, in the case of Conservatory students, students playing Senior recitals. This is because of the "once in a lifetime" character of these projects.

4. Papers must be double-spaced and have 1-inch margins. I reserve the right to return unread any illegible paper.

5. All written work at Oberlin College is covered by the Honor Code. No paper will be read before the Honor Code is signed: "I have adhered to the Honor Code in the writing of this exercise."

6. All written work for the course must be completed in order to pass it. That is to say, a student who receives an A on the first two papers and does not complete the third will fail the entire course.
