DESCRIPTION AND OBJECTIVES

Since the revolutionary era, long before the arrival of large numbers of Asian immigrants in the United States, images of “Orientals” have influenced discussions about American identity and character. In this course, we will study the significance of historical representations of Asians and Asian Americans in the national consciousness, beginning with the origins of Orientalism in western thought and ending with contemporary “Yellow Peril” discourse. We will explore the social, political, and cultural contexts in which images of Asians in America emerged and how they have changed (or not changed) over time. These explorations aim to clarify how representations of Asian people have functioned to shore up and protect racially circumscribed notions of “Americanness” with respect to citizenship, morality, work, gender, and sexuality, among other areas. The course also aims to hone students’ skills in reading and thinking critically, working with a variety of primary and secondary materials, writing with clarity and purpose, and discussing and debating in a respectful and rigorous manner.

The course is organized topically and chronologically. Topics include the construction of the Chinese “coolie,” the vilification of orientalized urban space in turn-of-the-century America, studies of Asian assimilation in the U.S. by early twentieth century sociologists, and the production of the “gook” image through U.S. military encounters with Asia. In addition to secondary works, the course utilizes an array of primary materials, including political pamphlets, social science research, films, poems, and newspaper articles. The objective here is to introduce students to a range of materials used in cultural and intellectual history and to reveal myriad locations in which race and racial boundaries are developed and articulated.

REQUIREMENTS

Books at Oberlin Bookstore
Henry Yu, Thinking Orientalism: Migration, Exoticism, and Contact in Modern America (Oxford University Press, 2002)

Other required readings are available online through Blackboard, and additional materials will be distributed in class.

With the exception of Week 1 and unless otherwise announced in class, all weekly reading assignments should be completed by our Tuesday meetings.

Final Grade Breakdown

Attendance and in-class participation. Attendance is mandatory and your active participation class discussion will be integral in this course. If you miss class, you must complete a makeup assignment to be arranged with me. Excessive absences and tardiness will negatively affect your grade. (10%)

Online discussion. At the beginning of each week, I will post discussion questions on Blackboard. You are required to respond online at least 5 times over the semester. You may respond to my question as well as classmates’ comments. Your postings are due by Wednesday midnight. (10%)

Primary source analysis. 600 word analysis of one primary document. Further details on this assignment will be given in class. Due October 4. (10%)

Midterm. In-class exam covering material and lectures from Weeks 1-7. October 18 (20%)

Primary source analysis. 1500 word essay (about 6 pages). You will gather a set of primary materials that constitute examples of Orientalist representation in American cultural and intellectual discourse. We will have a library session to learn how to look for material. Final draft due December 15 in class. (25%)

Final exam. Cumulative but with emphasis on second half of the term. December 20 7:00-9:00 PM (25%)

Grades for the coursework will be based on displayed intellectual content, originality of thought, mastery of course materials, and quality of expression. Generally, I do not grant extensions or give makeup exams, and late assignments will be graded down 1/5 of a grade for each day late. I may make an exception if you speak with me well before a due date.

OBERLIN HONOR CODE

By enrolling in this class you are agreeing to abide by Oberlin’s Honor Code and Honor System. Be sure you have read and understood your rights and responsibilities. You should make sure you are familiar with the Honor Code and Honor system. You can find it at this link: http://www.oberlin.edu/students/links-life/rules-reg07-08/honorcode.pdf.

SPECIAL NEEDS
I will make every effort to accommodate the needs of students with physical or learning disabilities. Do see me as soon as possible to discuss what steps need to be taken and any modifications that might be necessary.

OFFICE HOURS AND CONTACTING ME
The best way to contact me about discussing course matters is to come to office hours. I strongly encourage each of you to visit at least once during the term, if only to introduce yourself. You may contact me via email, and I will do my best to reply in a timely manner, though I usually do not check email after 10:00PM.
